Valuation conclusion

The indicative market value of the claim at 2 November 2026 is US$1,000,000 (one million United States dollars), within a range of US$500,000 to US$2,000,000.

Adopted value US$1,000,000

	Value (US$)	Per hectare (US$, 9,000 ha)
Low	500,000	56
Adopted	1,000,000	111
High	2,000,000	222

The range is wide because no resource, drilling or quality data exists to narrow it. A competent person's resource statement could move the value materially in either direction.

Basis and approach

The value rests on the market approach, using the one closely comparable public transaction in Binga and discounting it heavily for the absence of any resource data.

Comparable. In 2020 Contango Holdings agreed to acquire 70% of the company holding the Lubu coalfield (now Muchesu), together with its loans and mining data, for £6.45 million in shares. That implies about £9.2 million, or roughly US$11.8 million at an assumed 1.28 US dollars to the pound, for 100% of 19,236 hectares, and about US$613 per hectare. The asset carried a reported NI 43-101 resource above 1.3 billion tonnes and over US$20 million of earlier exploration spend.

Adjustment. The subject claim has no resource statement and no drilling, so it is valued at US$56 to US$222 per hectare, a discount of about 64% to 91% on the comparable. The adopted US$111 per hectare is about 82% below it. This discount is the valuer's judgement; no sale of a comparable bare claim in the district was identified.

Market context. Richards Bay thermal coal futures reached US$131.40 per tonne in late October 2026, and a coking coal operation is already working in Binga. Against that, the claim must still carry exploration cost and risk, the 3% coal levy on gross sales and a 25% corporate tax rate plus the 3% AIDS levy, and it is exposed to the state's "use it or lose it" policy on idle coal grants.

Assumptions and limiting conditions

This valuation holds only on the following assumptions and conditions.

- Title. The claim or special grant is assumed valid, correctly registered, unencumbered and in good standing, with fees paid and any work programme met. None of this was verified.
- Area and boundaries. The 9,000 hectares and the boundaries are as supplied by the client. Overlaps with other titles, protected areas or communities were not checked.
- No technical data. No geological, drilling, coal quality or logistics data was reviewed. No resource or reserve is stated or implied.
- Comparable. The benchmark is a single 2020 transaction settled in shares, converted at an assumed exchange rate. Public reports were relied on and not independently verified.
- Special capital gains tax. A transfer of mining title, including by a shareholder in a company that holds it, attracts special capital gains tax payable by the transferee. Sources give 5% of the transaction value where ministerial approval of the transfer is required, and some report 20%; the rate must be confirmed with ZIMRA. Section 15 relief for companies under the same control may be elected, but it should not be assumed to cover this tax. The transferee must be a registered taxpayer.
- Not a technical report. This is not a feasibility study, a SAMREC or JORC competent person's report, or a fairness opinion, and it must not be used to raise finance or report resources.
- Reliance and currency. It is for the client and the stated purpose only, and should be revisited if material information emerges or after six months.

Certification

I certify that this is a desktop valuation prepared on the information and assumptions stated above, and that the conclusion is my opinion of the indicative market value of the subject claim at the valuation date. [CONFIRM: I have no interest in the subject asset - signatory to confirm]
